Donald Trump criticises Israel's Lebanon policy, backs Syria role

Trump says Israel should let Syria tackle Hezbollah to reduce casualties

EVIAN

US President Donald Trump on Tuesday voiced sharp criticism of Israel's handling of its conflict with Hezbollah in Lebanon, suggesting that Syria could play a more effective role in countering the Iran-backed militant group.

Speaking on the sidelines of the G7 Summit in Evian, Trump praised Syrian President Ahmed al-Sharaa and said Israel's prolonged campaign against Hezbollah had resulted in excessive civilian casualties.

He claimed he had advised Israeli leaders to allow Syria to take the lead against the group if Israel was unable to achieve its objectives without significant loss of life.

Trump also took aim at Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, saying the Israeli leader needed to act more responsibly regarding Lebanon and the ongoing conflict.

> "If Israel can't do the job without killing everyone else, then Syria will do the job."
> —Donald Trump, US President

Trump described Sharaa as doing an "amazing job" and noted that the Syrian leader strongly opposed Hezbollah.

While acknowledging Sharaa's controversial past, Trump said Syria could be more effective in dealing with the group.

He also underlined his long-standing support for Israel, declaring that "without me there would be no Israel" because previous US presidents had been unwilling to take the steps he had taken in support of the country.

Trump-Netanyahu ties under spotlight

Trump expressed dissatisfaction with Israel's approach in Lebanon.

Trump said the campaign against Hezbollah had gone on too long.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi met US President Donald Trump on the sidelines of the G7 Summit in the French commune of Evian-les-Bains on Tuesday, marking their first face-to-face interaction in 16 months. The two leaders exchanged a warm handshake followed by a brief conversation. The brief interaction between the two leaders took place as the world leaders gathered for the event hosted by French President Emmanuel Macron. Modi and Trump are scheduled to hold a bilateral meeting on Wednesday on the sidelines of the summit.

Kharge demands Pradhan's resignation over exam irregularities

NEW DELHI

Congress president Mallikarjun Kharge on Tuesday intensified his attack on the BJP-led Centre, alleging that the government had failed its "first test of accountability" by refusing to seek the resignation of Union Education Minister Dharmendra Pradhan over recurring examination irregularities and paper leak controversies.

Reacting to the temporary restriction imposed on the Telegram messaging platform ahead of the NEET-UG 2026 re-examination, Kharge said the government was focusing on damage control instead of fixing systemic failures in the education sector.

In a post on social media, the Congress chief claimed that repeated paper leaks and examination controversies had adversely affected millions of students. He alleged that despite concerns surrounding examinations such as NEET, SSC, UGC-NET and CUET, the government had failed to ensure accountability.

Kharge further claimed that several students had suffered severe mental distress due to examination-related irregularities and accused Prime Minister Narendra Modi of remaining silent on the issue. He also referred to recent controversies involving CBSE evaluation and allegations surrounding UPSC examinations, arguing that public confidence in competitive exams was being eroded. The Congress has consistently demanded Pradhan's resignation over alleged lapses in conducting examinations and preventing paper leaks. The party is also set to launch a nationwide campaign on student issues, with senior leader Rahul Gandhi scheduled to address student conventions beginning in Kota on June 17.

- Issue: Exam irregularities and paper leaks
- Congress Demand: Resignation of Dharmendra Pradhan
- Focus Exams: NEET, SSC, UGC-NET, CUET
- NEET Re-test Date: June 21, 2026
- Congress Campaign: Student outreach from June 17

The Congress plans to intensify its campaign on youth-related issues, including examination irregularities and unemployment. Party leaders argue that repeated controversies surrounding competitive examinations have undermined students' trust in the recruitment and admission process. Rahul Gandhi's upcoming student interactions are expected to focus on these concerns and mobilise support among young voters ahead of future elections.

Karnataka HC dismisses PIL against Shivakumar cabinet

BENGALURU

The Karnataka High Court on Tuesday dismissed a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) challenging the constitutionality of Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar's newly constituted Council of Ministers, holding that the petition was based on a misreading of the Constitution and amounted to a waste of judicial time.

A division bench comprising Chief Justice Vibhu Bakhru and Justice K.S. Hemalekha dismissed the plea filed by Hubballi resident Mangalappa Hullikeri and directed him to deposit ₹50,000 with the Karnataka State Legal Services Authority within two weeks.

The petitioner had argued that since the Karnataka Assembly has 224 members, the ministry should have at least 24 ministers, interpreting the constitutional provision as mandating a minimum of 12% of the House strength. However, the court clarified that the Constitution specifies a minimum of 12 ministers and a maximum of 15% of the Assembly's strength.

The bench observed that the petition was founded on an "erroneous ground" and rejected a request to withdraw it, stating that it appeared to have been filed merely for publicity.

- Cabinet strength: 14 ministers (including CM and Deputy CM)
- Assembly strength: 224 members
- Constitutional minimum: 12 ministers
- Maximum allowed: 15% of Assembly strength (33 ministers)
- Fine imposed: ₹50,000

Cong hits back at Oppn over Bidadi township project

BENGALURU

Congress spokesperson M. Lakshman on Tuesday defended the proposed Bidadi Township Project and accused BJP and JD(S) leaders of spreading misinformation to derail a major infrastructure initiative aimed at easing Bengaluru's growing population and traffic burden.

Addressing a press conference at the KPCC office, Lakshman said the township proposal was originally conceived during the JD(S)-BJP coalition government headed by H.D. Kumaraswamy in 2006.

He noted that the state government had reissued a notification on May 27, 2026, for the acquisition of 7,481 acres in Bidadi to develop an integrated industrial and residential corridor.

Rejecting allegations of a ₹33,000-crore scam, Lakshman said there was no scope for corruption in the project and challenged Opposition leaders to produce evidence.

He maintained that the government would only acquire land, provide compensation and create infrastructure, while industries would establish facilities through a transparent process.

Doctors are visible gods, uphold public trust: DKS

BENGALURU

Calling doctors "visible gods," Karnataka Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar urged graduating medical students to uphold the faith and trust people place in the medical profession and dedicate themselves to serving society, especially in rural areas.

Addressing the 28th Annual Convocation of Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences (RGUHS) at the GKVK campus on Tuesday, Shivakumar said doctors play a critical role in shaping a healthier society and must ensure healthcare reaches every corner of the state.

"People approach doctors with immense trust even in their most difficult times. It is your responsibility to preserve that trust through dedicated service," he said while conferring degrees on students alongside Governor Thaawarchand Gehlot.

> "Doctors are visible gods. People come to you with immense faith and confidence. Protect that trust and serve society with dedication."
> —D.K. Shivakumar, CM

The Chief Minister highlighted Karnataka's leadership in medical education, noting that the state produces nearly 13,940 doctors annually and has 72 medical colleges, the highest in the country. He said Karnataka's healthcare professionals are serving with distinction across the globe and have earned recognition for their expertise and commitment.

Emphasising the need for equitable healthcare, Shivakumar called upon young doctors to serve in rural regions and help reduce migration to cities for medical treatment. He also praised Medical Education Minister Sharan Prakash Patil for bringing discipline and efficiency to the department.

Describing RGUHS as one of India's largest health sciences universities, Shivakumar said it has played a pivotal role in producing skilled healthcare professionals over the past three decades.

CM's Message to Young Doctors

- Contribute to a drug-free Karnataka and India
- Become role models through service and commitment

Kakoli's remarks at panel meeting deepen rift within TMC

NEW DELHI

The internal feud within the Trinamool Congress (TMC) escalated on Tuesday after rebel MP Kakoli Ghosh Dastidar criticised the West Bengal government over child marriage and child trafficking during a meeting of the Parliamentary Standing Committee on Home Affairs.

Dastidar, who is leading a group of 20 rebel Lok Sabha MPs seeking a separate identity within Parliament, attended the committee meeting that examined issues related to crimes against children.

Speaking to reporters later, she alleged that child marriage remains widespread in West Bengal and claimed that the previous state government had failed to take adequate measures to curb the practice. The MP also raised concerns over child trafficking, alleging that young girls were being trafficked outside the country. She said she sought information on action against those involved in child abuse, trafficking and child marriage.

"Child marriage is very prevalent in West Bengal, and adequate steps were not taken to stop it. Child trafficking is also a serious concern."
-Kakoli Ghosh Dastidar, LS MP

Her remarks triggered a sharp reaction from senior TMC leader Saugata Roy, who suggested that the party could move a privilege notice against her.

DEADLY QUAKE STRIKES

Qinghai: 1 killed, 4 injured in 6.3-magnitude quake

BEIJING

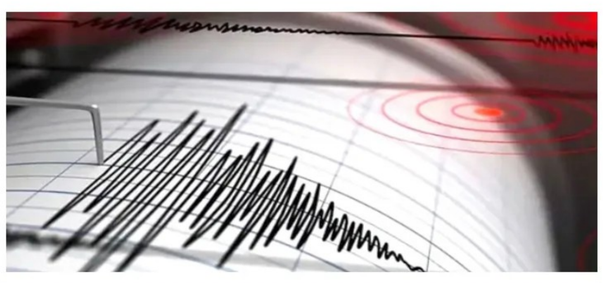
At least one person was killed and four others injured after a powerful 6.3-magnitude earthquake struck northwestern China's Qinghai province on Tuesday, prompting rescue operations and emergency response measures.

According to the China Earthquake Networks Center, the quake hit a high-altitude area in Haixi Prefecture at 5:06 pm local time. The tremor occurred at a depth of 10 km and was followed by several aftershocks, including one measuring 4.9 in magnitude.

State media reports said authorities swiftly evacuated workers from coal mines located near the epicentre as a precautionary measure. Emergency teams were deployed to assess casualties, inspect damaged infrastructure and search for any people who may have been trapped.

China's earthquake administration activated its emergency response mechanism immediately after the quake. Officials are continuing to evaluate the extent of property damage and monitor the possibility of secondary disasters such as landslides or structural collapses.

The affected region is sparsely populated but lies in a seismically active zone that has experienced several earthquakes in recent years. Rescue personnel remain on alert as aftershocks continue to be recorded.



Authorities have mobilised rescue teams to the affected area to search for trapped individuals and assess damage to infrastructure. All workers in nearby coal mines were safely evacuated following the quake. Officials are also monitoring aftershocks and potential secondary hazards while conducting a detailed assessment of losses. Emergency services remain on high alert as relief operations continue across the region.

ISI-backed terror network busted in Delhi-NCR, seven operatives arrested

NEW DELHI

Delhi Police on Tuesday dismantled a Pakistan-backed terror-crime syndicate allegedly involved in smuggling arms and narcotics into India and planning attacks in the Delhi-NCR region. Seven operatives linked to the network were arrested during a major operation by the Special Cell.

According to police, the module was being run by Pakistan-based gangster-turned-terrorists Shahzad Bhatti and Ajmal Gujjar, who are suspected to be operating under the patronage of Pakistan's Inter-Services Intelligence (ISI). The syndicate allegedly procured illegal weapons and drugs smuggled into India through drone drops along the Punjab border and distributed them across Delhi-NCR.

Police said all seven have criminal backgrounds, with cases ranging from murder and robbery to violations of the Arms Act and NDPS Act.

Investigators recovered five sophisticated semi-automatic pistols, 41 live cartridges, seven mobile phones containing alleged chats and voice notes with Pakistan-based handlers, and an SUV. Authorities also seized details of bank accounts suspected to have been used for laundering proceeds from illegal arms and narcotics sales.

HC upholds transfer of veterinary university land for public projects

PIL challenged government decision to allot land for judges' quarters project

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

The Karnataka High Court has dismissed a Public Interest Litigation (PIL) challenging the state government's decision to transfer seven acres of land belonging to the Karnataka Veterinary, Animal and Fisheries Sciences University (KVAFSU) in Hebbal for the construction of judges' quarters and a super-specialty hospital.

The PIL was jointly filed by the Karnataka Veterinary Association, Bengaluru Veterinary College Alumni Association and two other organisations, questioning a government order issued on January 8, 2026. The order directed the transfer of four acres of land adjacent to Nyayagrama for residential quarters for High Court judges and another three acres for a super-specialty hospital.

A division bench comprising Justice D.K. Singh and Justice T.M. Nadaf upheld the government's decision, observing that the transfer of land was a policy matter and did not warrant judicial interference.

"The transfer of 4+3 acres, totalling seven acres, is a policy decision for construction of residences for High Court judges and a super-specialty hospital for the general public," the bench noted. The court reiterated that policy decisions are generally beyond judicial review unless they are arbitrary, procedurally flawed or contrary to law.

The petitioners had argued that the transfer would adversely affect the veterinary college's teaching, research and extension activities. They also expressed concerns that the reduction in land could impact the institution's recognition by the Veterinary Council of India and affect future accreditation assessments.

However, after examining relevant regulations and records, the court found that a veterinary college is required to maintain around 150 acres of land. KVAFSU currently possesses approximately 278 acres, and even after the transfer of seven acres, the university would continue to have significantly more land than the prescribed minimum.

"The transfer of seven acres out of about 278 acres will not, in any manner, affect the minimum land requirements under the regulations," the bench observed.

The court also emphasised the importance of providing official accommodation to judges, describing it as an essential component of judicial independence.

It noted that only 19 official residences are currently available for High Court judges against the sanctioned strength of 62, forcing many judges to stay in rented accommodation.

Regarding the proposed hospital, the bench held that the project would serve a larger public purpose by enhancing access to advanced healthcare services. Concluding that both projects were in the broader public interest, the High Court dismissed the petition and upheld the land transfer.

Jarkiholi urges caution on Bidadi township project

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Public Works Minister Satish Jarkiholi has expressed reservations about the proposed Bidadi Township project, stating that the government should ensure it is not burdened by any large-scale development scheme.

Speaking to reporters in Bengaluru on Tuesday, Jarkiholi said the project would be discussed in the Cabinet meeting scheduled for Saturday. While not opposing the proposal outright, he stressed the need for careful consideration of its financial and political implications. "The construction of the township should not become a burden on the government. The government should not suffer because of any scheme. Such issues must be examined thoroughly," he said.

Jarkiholi noted that the matter also has political significance and should be discussed in the broader interests of both the govt and the ruling party.

AI, startups and talent to drive Bengaluru's next growth phase: Expats

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Being an international city with a thriving startup ecosystem and cross-cultural exchanges, Bengaluru is poised for further growth, expatriates say.

Expatriates living and working in Bengaluru believe the city is well-positioned to emerge as one of the world's leading technology and business centres over the next decade, powered by artificial intelligence, innovation, entrepreneurship and a skilled workforce.

Speaking at the Expat Business Council's (EBC) June networking event, business leaders and professionals from different countries highlighted Bengaluru's economic strength, cosmopolitan culture and startup ecosystem as key factors driving its future growth.

Chandra Arya, CEO of Acleo Strategies Inc and former Member of Parliament in Canada, described Bengaluru as a city whose economic and demographic scale rivals that of many countries.

"Bengaluru is not just a city. Its GDP and population are equal to or better than those of many nations," Arya said. He noted that opportunities exist across a wide range of sectors, including semiconductor design, printed circuit board manufacturing, space technology and advanced engineering.

Arya also pointed to the city's rapid geographic expansion beyond the traditional central business district. Areas such as Dobbaspet, Devanahalli, Hoskote, Chikkaballapur, Peenya, Nagasandra and Whitefield are emerging as important business and industrial hubs. "Hopefully, this expansion will happen in a sustainable and green manner," he added.

EBC President Anna Kuhnt said Bengaluru's appeal lies in its international outlook and ability to foster innovation through collaboration. While AI is expected to influence almost every industry, she stressed that human skills and networking would remain vital.

"Blue-collar jobs and traditional skills such as handicrafts cannot easily be replaced by AI. Human connections and networking will become even more important in the future," she said.

However, participants also highlighted infrastructure challenges. Franco Bellillo, Chief Operating Officer of SUN Mobility, warned that traffic congestion and inadequate infrastructure could slow Bengaluru's growth if not addressed.

"Bengaluru will remain a major technology hub, but infrastructure and mobility are becoming concerns. Some companies may look to expand in cities such as Hyderabad that are investing heavily in infrastructure," he observed.

Arya echoed similar concerns, noting that while Metro connectivity is improving, last-mile transport remains a challenge.

Impressed by India's problem-solving spirit

Heike Wolter, co-author of What the West Should Learn From India, said one of the qualities she admires most about India is its culture of finding practical solutions. "People here embrace difficult situations and always find a workaround. That spirit of resilience and adaptability is remarkable," she said.

Dug-up SH-9 leaves Yelahanka commuters frustrated

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

A crucial stretch of State Highway-9 in Yelahanka has turned into a major source of inconvenience for thousands of commuters, with residents demanding answers over prolonged roadworks, worsening traffic congestion and deteriorating road conditions.

The nearly 5-km stretch between the NES office and Nagenahalli Gate is riddled with dug-up sections, loose gravel, potholes and construction debris, making daily travel difficult and unsafe. Residents say the situation has steadily worsened, with little information on which agency is carrying out the work or when the road will be restored.

The disruption begins near the Yelahanka police station junction, where a flyover project has been under construction since 2022. While road-widening work is under way on one side, excavation for drainage and water pipelines on the opposite carriageway has further compounded traffic woes.

Commuters report severe congestion during peak hours, particularly near Puttenahalli Lake and Anantapura Gate. Office-goers travelling towards Doddaballapur Road often spend an additional 15 minutes navigating bottlenecks caused by narrowed carriageways and uneven road surfaces.

Residents also expressed concern over safety risks. Priyanka Shetty, who lives along the corridor, said the road has been repeatedly dug up and patched without proper restoration.

"As long-time residents, we have seen this road being dug up several times, but this project seems never-ending. There is no clarity about which agency is responsible, and potholes have become dangerous, especially for two-wheeler riders," she said.

The lack of coordination among agencies has added to public confusion.

VTU shifts Saturday classes online to support fuel conservation

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

Visvesvaraya Technological University (VTU) has decided to conduct Saturday classes online across all engineering colleges affiliated to the university as part of a fuel conservation and resource-saving initiative.

The decision, which takes effect immediately, will apply to the second, fourth and fifth Saturdays of every month, when classes are normally held. The first and third Saturdays will continue to remain holidays as per the existing academic calendar.

VTU Vice-Chancellor S. Vidyashankar said the move was aimed at reducing fuel consumption, easing traffic congestion and contributing to national efforts towards efficient use of natural resources.

"University Grants Commission guidelines permit blended learning in a 60:40 ratio, with 60 per cent offline and 40 per cent online classes. We are shifting only a few Saturday sessions online, which remains well within those norms," he said.

According to the university, the proposal was discussed and unanimously approved at a recent Executive Committee meeting.

The Vice-Chancellor noted that lakhs of students commute to colleges every week and that conducting classes online on selected Saturdays would significantly reduce travel.

"Students will avoid commuting to campus, leading to fuel savings, reduced traffic and lower air pollution," he said.

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

After initiating a clean-up of the Gruha Lakshmi scheme, the Karnataka government has turned its attention to the Gruha Jyothi programme, which provides up to 200 units of free electricity every month, amid concerns over misuse and ineligible beneficiaries.

A six-month audit conducted by the State Guarantee Schemes Implementation Authority has reportedly found that more than 10 lakh beneficiaries availing the scheme are not registered voters in Karnataka. The review has also identified cases where individuals have been claiming benefits through multiple Revenue Register (RR) numbers, violating eligibility norms.

The government has now decided to strictly enforce the scheme's guidelines, under which only Karnataka voters are eligible and each beneficiary can avail the benefit for only one domestic RR number.

Currently, nearly 1.7 crore consumers receive free electricity under the Gruha Jyothi scheme through the state's five electricity supply companies (ESCOMs). The government spends approximately ₹800 crore every month to fund the subsidy.

Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar said the welfare programme is intended exclusively for Karnataka residents who are registered voters in the state.

"These schemes are not meant for outsiders. We will ensure that the benefits are enjoyed only by voters in Karnataka. Why should we extend these benefits to those who do not vote here?" he said.

Guarantee Implementation Authority Vice-Chairperson Dinesh Gooligowda said the audit had uncovered several irregularities. According to him, many urban households possess separate RR numbers for domestic electricity use and water pumping systems or borewells. While the scheme covers only domestic consumption, some beneficiaries have allegedly claimed free power for both connections. Authorities have also found instances where subsidised electricity supplied under the scheme was being used for commercial activities operating from residential premises.

To address these issues, the government is considering introducing a Know Your Customer (KYC) verification process to confirm voter registration status and ensure that RR numbers are linked only to eligible residential units.

CHALLENGING TRAFFIC TASK

CH NEWS, BENGALURU

A few hours spent managing traffic at Bengaluru's bustling junctions has been enough to give many residents a deeper appreciation of the challenges faced by traffic police personnel every day.

The Bengaluru Traffic Police's (BTP) initiative, 'Be a Traffic Cop for a Day', launched in October 2025, has attracted significant public participation, with 1,864 volunteers signing up so far. The programme allows citizens to experience traffic management firsthand and understand the complexities of regulating traffic in one of India's busiest cities.

Officials said the initiative was introduced to bridge the gap between citizens and traffic personnel while encouraging greater road discipline and cooperation.

Most participants have been students and working professionals aged between 18 and 50 years.

After attending a two-hour orientation on safety procedures and operational challenges, volunteers were deployed at major junctions, including Haralur, Wilson Garden, Banashankari and Jayanagar.

Many reported witnessing between 20 and 30 traffic violations during a single shift, ranging from riding without helmets and using mobile phones while driving to reckless honking and ignoring police instructions.

Anoop A. Shetty, Deputy Commissioner of Police (Traffic-West), said the response had been encouraging. "Many volunteers chose busy locations such as Chalukya Circle and City Grounds. It was heartening to see young people participate and gain a better understanding of the traffic system. Several also offered practical suggestions for improving traffic management," he said.

Syed Ghouse Peeran, a 40-year-old software professional, joined the programme to take a break from routine work and understand on-ground realities. He said manually regulating traffic was far more challenging than he had imagined.

"Vehicles approach from all directions, and if the person managing traffic gets distracted even briefly, congestion builds up almost instantly," he said.

Similarly, 23-year-old doctor Surya Kiran volunteered at the Banashankari junction during evening peak hours. He observed that pedestrians often contributed significantly to traffic disruptions.

"Many people ignore signals and zebra crossings. Even when vehicles have a green signal, pedestrians continue crossing the road, creating confusion and increasing the risk of accidents," he said.

Traffic police officials hope the initiative will foster greater empathy among road users and encourage stricter adherence to traffic rules, ultimately making Bengaluru's roads safer and more orderly for everyone.

Curve on Peruvayi road causes accidents

Vitla

A narrow and steep curve on the Peruvayi–Beripadavu road near the Karnataka-Kerala border has become a serious accident-prone spot. Locals say poor maintenance and the absence of warning boards have led to repeated mishaps on this stretch. Recently, a car travelling from Peruvayi towards Kerala lost control at the curve and plunged off a bridge into a stream, injuring five passengers. Villagers allege that the lack of proper signage by the district engineering department has made the road unsafe, especially during the monsoon when water levels rise and visibility reduces. Following repeated accidents, residents have demanded immediate installation of safety boards and urgent repair of the bridge.

Mangaluru Airport activates advanced PAL CAT-I lighting system

Mangaluru International Airport has launched a new PAL CAT-I lighting system improving landing safety and visibility significantly.

MANGALURU

Mangaluru International Airport has successfully commissioned a Precision Approach Lighting (PAL) Category-I system for Runway 24 after receiving approval from the Directorate General of Civil Aviation (DGCA), the airport operator said.

The system has been installed to significantly enhance operational safety and landing accuracy, particularly during low-visibility conditions. According to Mangaluru International Airport Limited (MGIAL), a subsidiary of Adani Enterprises Limited, the new lighting system will provide pilots with improved visual guidance during the critical final stages of landing.

The PAL CAT-I system is specifically designed for airports with challenging terrain, including table-top runways, and is intended to improve situational awareness and reduce landing risks. Officials said the system will strengthen the airport's commitment to safe, reliable, and efficient flight operations while ensuring compliance with regulatory standards.

MGIAL stated that the installation is one of the most unique airfield lighting systems in India and only the second of its kind in Asia. The system extends up to 900 metres from the runway threshold and includes an Airfield Lighting Intelligent Management System (ALIMS) mounted on specially designed tall lattice towers.

The towers used in the project are reportedly taller than the iconic Qutub Minar, highlighting the scale and engineering complexity of the installation. In total, 17 lattice structures have been installed, each equipped with multiple lighting units, including sequenced flashing lights. The design also allows maintenance units to be lowered for servicing.

Officials emphasized that the project was completed with a zero-accident record during construction, underscoring strict safety standards followed throughout execution.

The new system is expected to improve runway visibility, enhance pilot awareness, reduce go-arounds and diversions, and allow better control of landing operations, especially in adverse weather conditions.

Airport authorities said the commissioning of the PAL CAT-I system reflects a continued focus on adopting advanced aviation technologies to improve passenger safety and confidence.

Poor monsoon hits Harangi reservoir inflow

MADIKERI

Poor monsoon rainfall has sharply reduced inflow to Harangi Reservoir in Kodagu, causing concern among farmers as water storage levels continue to decline rapidly.

The lack of adequate monsoon rainfall has caused a sharp decline in the inflow to the only major reservoir in Kodagu district, the Harangi Reservoir, raising serious concern among farmers.

Despite the onset of the monsoon season, the district has not received expected rainfall levels. Officials noted that persistent dry conditions and rising temperatures since Monday have created an unusual summer-like climate during the monsoon period. As a result, the water inflow into the reservoir has been steadily decreasing.

At present, the inflow to the Harangi Reservoir stands at only about 285 cusecs, while around 180 cusecs of water is being released. This marks a steep contrast compared to the same period last year, when inflow was recorded at 4,736 cusecs and outflow at 4,583 cusecs, highlighting the severity of this year's rainfall deficit.

The reservoir has a total storage capacity of 8.5 TMC, but current storage has dropped to approximately 3.0 TMC. Officials and farmers have expressed concern that continued poor rainfall could significantly affect irrigation and agricultural activities across the region.

Farmers in the area fear that delayed and insufficient monsoon showers may disrupt sowing cycles and reduce crop yields, especially in water-dependent agricultural zones. Many have urged authorities to closely monitor reservoir levels and prepare contingency plans to manage water distribution efficiently.

Weather experts suggest that if rainfall does not improve in the coming weeks, water stress could increase further in the district, impacting both agriculture and drinking water supply in several parts of Kodagu.

The situation has prompted calls for better long-term water management strategies to reduce dependence on erratic monsoon patterns and safeguard agricultural livelihoods in the region.

Shivamogga committee supports government steps to prevent misuse of five guarantee schemes and improve beneficiary verification system.

SHIVAMOGGA

The district-level Guarantee Scheme Implementation Authority in Shivamogga has welcomed the state government's decision to prevent misuse of the five guarantee schemes by requiring fresh applications and issuing identification cards to beneficiaries.

Chairing a review meeting at the Zilla Panchayat Abdul Nazeer Sab hall, Authority Chairman C.S. Chandrabhupal said the new measures would help ensure that welfare benefits reach genuine beneficiaries under schemes such as Gruha Lakshmi and Gruha Jyothi.

The committee noted several irregularities in the implementation of Gruha Lakshmi, including cases where benefits were still being credited to bank accounts of deceased beneficiaries. Officials also reported instances of multiple women from the same household receiving benefits as separate heads of families. It was observed that around 5,618 ineligible beneficiaries, including income tax payers, were receiving scheme benefits in the district, causing financial loss to the government.

Under the Gruha Jyothi scheme, concerns were raised over misuse of the 200-unit free electricity benefit for commercial purposes and multiple electricity connections registered under a single name. Authorities were instructed to conduct detailed verification, especially in rental houses, to ensure compliance.

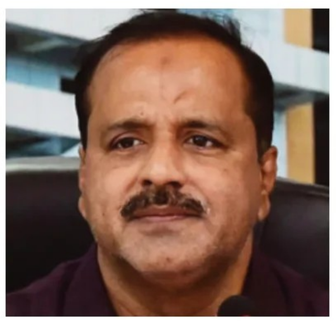
Khader calls for stronger booth-level party organisation

MANGALURU



Karnataka Minister U T Khader has said that strengthening the party at the booth level is more important than internal criticism, stressing the need to focus on organisational discipline and grassroots outreach.

Speaking in Mangaluru, Khader said the party must work with unity and aim for victory in the 2028 Assembly elections, as well as upcoming Corporation, Zilla Panchayat, and other local body polls. He emphasized that booth-level consolidation would be key to electoral success.

He noted that political strength is built from the ground up and urged party workers to focus on connecting with voters directly at the booth level. According to him, sustained engagement with local communities would help translate government welfare schemes into electoral support.

Khader also indicated that internal discussions and differences should not distract from the larger goal of strengthening the organisation. He called for coordinated efforts among leaders, elected representatives, and party workers to ensure effective implementation of strategies at the grassroots.

Party leaders present at the meeting echoed similar views, highlighting the importance of mobilising workers and improving coordination across districts. They also discussed strategies to improve outreach in urban and rural areas ahead of upcoming elections.

The minister's remarks come amid ongoing organisational reviews within the party, where emphasis is being placed on booth-level committees as the foundation of election planning.

Khader reiterated that the party's focus should remain on building trust among voters and delivering on development and welfare commitments, rather than engaging in unnecessary criticism.

TOURIST ACCESS CONTROL

Karnataka tightens safety rules for elephant camps

SHIVAMOGGA

In the aftermath of the Dubare tragedy, the Karnataka Forest Department has issued revised Standard Operating Procedures (SOPs) for three major elephant tourism centres in the state—Dubare, Mathigodu, and Sakrebailu camps.

The new guidelines mandate the creation of clearly demarcated safety zones, red zones, amber zones, and green zones within each camp to regulate visitor movement and reduce the risk of human–elephant interactions turning dangerous. Officials said the zoning system is intended to bring uniform safety standards across all elephant camps and improve overall management of tourist activities.

According to the SOPs, the red zones will be highly restricted areas where direct human contact with elephants is either prohibited or strictly controlled by trained mahouts and forest staff. The amber zones will allow limited, supervised access under specific conditions, while green zones will be designated as safe viewing areas for tourists. The safety zones will function as buffer areas to ensure controlled movement between different sections of the camp.

The Forest Department stated that the new framework is aimed at preventing accidents, ensuring better crowd regulation, and reducing stress on captive elephants. Authorities have also emphasized the need for improved surveillance, trained personnel, and stricter enforcement of rules at all camps.

The move follows growing concerns over safety lapses in elephant tourism after the Dubare incident, which triggered public outcry and a review of existing practices. Officials said that lessons from the tragedy highlighted the need for more structured visitor management and better risk classification within elephant habitats used for tourism.

Forest officials added that implementation will include staff training, updated signage, and strict monitoring of visitor entry points. Camps will also be required to maintain emergency response protocols and ensure that elephants are handled only by authorized and experienced mahouts.

The department is expected to roll out compliance checks in the coming weeks to ensure all three camps fully adopt the new SOPs. Authorities believe the measures will enhance both visitor safety and animal welfare while promoting responsible eco-tourism in Karnataka.

BJP demands complete police system revamp

Mysuru

Mysuru BJP Media Coordinator Mahesh Raje Urs has urged the state government to totally revamp the Mysuru City Police setup following its utter failure to check the criminal activities in the city. Once the Mysuru City Police had made a good name for its efficient working and checking all nefarious activities within the city. The anti-rowdy squad started by the then Police Commissioner H.R.Kasturirangan had become a model for the entire state. However, that image has taken severe beating with no fear of law for the anti-social elements and drug peddlers. It was surprising that how did the local police was not aware of the functioning of an illegal bar in their jurisdiction. This shows the poor governance of the police department in the city. It is high time the state government post a new team of top police officials to restore law and order in the city.

Illegal bar blaze exposes governance failure in Mysuru

2 deaths in Dattagalli fire raise questions over Excise, Police and Fire Safety Lapses

SHYAM SUNDAR VATTAM
MYSURU

The tragic death of two persons in a fire accident at an allegedly illegal bar and restaurant at Dattagalli on Monday has sparked serious questions about the functioning of law enforcement and regulatory agencies in Mysuru.

The incident has exposed what many see as a disturbing culture of negligence, allowing illegal businesses to thrive despite clear violations of the law.

Investigations have revealed that the establishment reportedly lacked permission to serve liquor, yet continued operations openly and without fear of action. The incident has raised concerns about how such an illegal venture could function unchecked in Mysuru, the home district of former Chief Minister Siddaramaiah.

Urban Development Minister Dr. Yathindra Siddaramaiah has blamed the Excise Department for failing to curb the illegal sale of liquor. However, critics argue that responsibility cannot rest solely with the Excise Department. Questions are also being raised about the role of the Police Department, which conducts regular patrols across the city but allegedly failed to detect or act against the unlawful activities.

The Fire and Emergency Services Department too has come under scrutiny. Reports suggest that the building allegedly lacked adequate fire safety measures and may have violated several safety regulations. Critics contend that timely inspections and enforcement could have prevented the tragedy and saved two precious lives.

The incident has reignited concerns over the effectiveness of Mysuru's bureaucracy. Observers point to a recent case in which a narcotics manufacturing unit operating on the city's Ring Road was unearthed by Mumbai Police, while local authorities reportedly remained unaware of its existence. The episode had already raised questions about intelligence gathering and enforcement mechanisms in the city.

Public anger is growing over what many describe as selective enforcement of laws. While police frequently register cases against individuals for consuming liquor in public places, allegations persist that several establishments along the Ring Road openly serve liquor without valid licences.

Residents and civic activists claim that illegal liquor-serving outlets continue to operate under the protection of influential networks and administrative apathy. The Dattagalli tragedy, they argue, is not merely an accident but a consequence of systemic failure and lack of accountability.

As investigations continue, citizens are demanding a comprehensive crackdown on illegal businesses and strict action against officials found responsible for regulatory lapses. For many, the Dattagalli fire has become a grim reminder that failure to enforce the law can have fatal consequences.

Minister blames Excise, Fire Departments for lapses incident

MYSURU

Urban Development Minister Dr. Yatindra Siddaramaiah on Tuesday blamed lapses by the Excise and Fire Departments for the fire tragedy at a bar and restaurant in Dattagalli that claimed two lives and left seven others injured in Mysuru on Monday.

Speaking to reporters after visiting the site, he said a short circuit had triggered the blaze at Mara Restaurant on Ring Road. The injured are undergoing treatment in hospital. The establishment was operating a bar and restaurant on the second floor without the required licence. While permission had been granted only for restaurant operations, liquor was allegedly being served illegally. The menu itself showed that liquor was being served. A complaint has been filed against the owner for violating the law.

Dr Yatindra held the Excise Department primarily responsible for allowing the illegal operation to continue and said action should be initiated against the Excise Deputy Commissioner, including suspension, and added that he had directed the district administration to submit a report. Reports had emerged of several restaurants along Ring Road serving liquor without licences. Police and excise officials had been instructed to conduct joint inspections of all such establishments and take strict action wherever violations are found.

The Minister also pointed to serious shortcomings in fire safety compliance at the restaurant. According to him, the African-themed establishment had used highly inflammable materials such as grass and bamboo without adequate fire safety arrangements. As a result, the fire spread rapidly after the short circuit. The Fire

Dr Yatindra blamed Excise Department for illegal liquor operations, sought suspension of officials, ordered report submission, and directed joint inspections to enforce strict action

Department would also be held accountable for permitting the establishment to function without proper safety measures. Officials must inspect commercial complexes across Mysuru and ensure strict compliance with fire safety regulations.

Responding to questions, Dr. Yatindra said some restaurants had been promoting "bring your own bottle" practices through social media and allowing customers to consume liquor on their premises without licences. Such practices were illegal and would invite stringent action.

On compensation for the victims' families, the Minister said he had spoken to Chief Minister D.K.Shivakumar and requested assistance from the Chief Minister's Relief Fund. The CM had agreed in principle, and the compensation amount would be announced shortly.

Turning to politics, Dr. Yatindra said the Congress was fully prepared for the Legislative Council elections and expressed confidence of victory.

On the proposed Bidadi township project, he said Bengaluru's expansion was necessary and that the government would proceed only after ensuring fair compensation and rehabilitation for affected farmers.He also reiterated that the State Government's guarantee schemes would continue, while measures would be taken to prevent ineligible beneficiaries from availing the benefits.

Protesters demanded urgent tender completion or direct food distribution, citing seasonal hardship and irregular nutrition kit distribution delays

Tribals stage stir over delay in distribution of nutrition kit

MYSURU

Members of the All India Jana Adhikara Suraksha Samiti staged a protest in front of the Deputy Commissioner's Office in Mysuru on Tuesday, condemning the delay in the distribution of nutritional food kits meant for tribal communities.

The protesters said that a majority of tribal families living in H.D. Kote, Saragur, Nanjangud, Hunsur and Periyapatna taluks depend on agricultural labour for their livelihood. Struggling with illiteracy, malnutrition and poverty, many tribal people are unaware of their legal rights. To address malnutrition among these vulnerable communities, special nutrition kits are distributed every month through the Integrated Tribal Development Project (ITDP).

However, the activists alleged that the distribution is frequently disrupted every year due to delays in the tender process, resulting in one or two months of missed supplies. This year, they claimed, nutrition kits have not been distributed for the past three months.

The protesters urged the authorities to immediately complete the tender process. Alternatively, they demanded that the district administration procure and distribute the food items directly until a new tender is finalized. They pointed out that April and May are particularly difficult months for tribal labourers, as employment opportunities are scarce during this period. They also alleged that nutrition kits were not distributed in January and February, while the kit distributed in March actually corresponded to January's allocation.

According to the protesters, repeated delays caused by tender procedures and other technical issues are defeating the very purpose of the welfare scheme. They called upon the concerned officials to resolve the issue without further delay.

CHITRADURGA

Concerns have been raised over the condition of several government school buildings in Chitradurga district, with reports indicating that dilapidated infrastructure is putting the safety of students at risk. The issue has prompted administrative attention following instructions from senior officials to conduct urgent inspections.

Additional Chief Secretary Rashmi Mahesh has directed Deputy Directors of Public Instruction (DDPIs) to carry out detailed inspections of school buildings across the district and identify structures that are unsafe for continued use. The directive comes amid growing concerns about the structural stability of ageing classrooms in rural and semi-urban areas.

Preliminary reports suggest that several school buildings require immediate repair or reconstruction due to weakened roofs, cracked walls, and poor maintenance. In some cases, classrooms are reportedly being used despite visible signs of structural damage, raising fears among parents and education stakeholders.

Officials have been asked to prepare a comprehensive list of vulnerable school buildings and submit recommendations for either renovation or demolition. The administration is also expected to prioritise emergency repairs in schools where students continue to attend classes despite unsafe conditions.

Education department sources said that safety audits will focus on identifying high-risk structures and ensuring that students are relocated to safer classrooms wherever necessary. Temporary arrangements, including shifting classes to alternate buildings or nearby facilities, are likely to be considered in critical cases.

The issue has drawn attention to the broader challenge of maintaining government school infrastructure, particularly in districts where ageing buildings have not undergone timely upgrades.

According to him, invitations have been extended to senior Congress leaders including Rahul Gandhi, AICC president Mallikarjun Kharge, K.C. Venugopal, and Randeep Surjewala. He also said that former Chief Minister Siddaramaiah would be felicitated on the occasion.

Anjaneya claimed that the Congress government's five guarantee schemes have helped make Karnataka "hunger-free," and dismissed opposition criticism that the state is facing financial distress.

Mangaluru MLA Kamath criticises Kharge over RSS remarks

MLA stressed improving law and order, public safety, services, development, and education, urging focus on governance over political debates

MANGALURU

MLA Vedavyasa Kamath has strongly criticised Karnataka Home Minister Priyank Kharge, accusing him of diverting attention from state governance issues by repeatedly targeting the RSS.

Kamath said it was "foolish" to believe that any political authority could control the RSS and urged Kharge to focus on real administrative challenges instead of making what he described as politically motivated remarks. He stated that the government should prioritize issues directly affecting citizens rather than engaging in ideological confrontations.

He further argued that Karnataka is facing several pressing concerns, including declining academic performance in certain regions, inadequate infrastructure in schools and colleges, and recurring incidents of poor maintenance such as collapsing roofs in educational institutions. According to him, these issues reflect deeper administrative failures that require immediate attention.

The MLA also raised concerns about law and order in parts of the state, stating that governance should focus on strengthening public safety and improving basic services rather than engaging in political debates. He said development work and education reforms should be the government's primary focus.

Kamath alleged that repeated criticism of the RSS was part of a broader political strategy aimed at influencing public sentiment. He claimed that such statements were distractions from more important governance responsibilities.

He also made political remarks regarding internal dynamics within the ruling Congress party, suggesting that recent statements were influenced by political positioning. However, these claims remain part of political discourse and have not been independently verified.The comments have added to the ongoing exchange of criticisms between political leaders in Karnataka, where ideological and administrative issues frequently intersect. While the ruling party has not issued an official response, the remarks are expected to further intensify political debate in the state.Observers note that such exchanges reflect the broader political climate in Karnataka, where governance issues and ideological positions often become closely intertwined in public discussions.

Guarantee schemes will continue says K Raju

Raju said Grihalakshmi records are being updated after beneficiary deaths, noting Rs 3.31 crore wrongly credited in Ramanagara and efforts to ensure transparency

RAMANAGARA

Former MLA and District Guarantee Implementation Committee President K. Raju has clarified that the state government's five guarantee schemes will continue without any interruption, dismissing opposition claims as false propaganda. He made these remarks during a press conference held at his office in the Zilla Panchayat Bhavan on Tuesday.

He said the Congress government has successfully implemented the five guarantee schemes after coming to power, and their benefits have reached households across the state. He strongly denied rumours that the schemes would be stopped and said the opposition was misleading the public for political gain.

Raju also spoke about the Grihalakshmi scheme and said around 2.80 lakh women beneficiaries in the state had passed away, which has led to a revision process of the beneficiary list. He said the government is updating records to ensure benefits reach the right people and prevent misuse of funds.

He stated that in Ramanagara district alone, Rs 3.31 crore had been wrongly transferred to accounts of deceased beneficiaries. He said officials and Anganwadi workers are now collecting accurate information from villages to correct such errors and maintain transparency in welfare delivery.

Responding to political criticism, Raju questioned former Chief Minister and Union Minister H.D. Kumaraswamy, asking him not to indulge in politics of jealousy. He also commented on claims regarding wealth and challenged Kumaraswamy to explain how he built his assets over the years. He said leaders should focus on development rather than personal attacks.

He further defended Deputy Chief Minister D.K. Shivakumar, stating that allegations of corruption were politically motivated. He also criticized opposition leaders R. Ashok and others, urging them to speak responsibly and support development work in the state instead of making baseless statements.

Raju also demanded that senior leader H.C. Balakrishna be given a ministerial position, saying it would help strengthen development efforts in the district. He expressed confidence that Balakrishna would be included in the next cabinet expansion.

Several committee members and local leaders were present at the press conference. The meeting concluded with a call to focus on welfare programs, ensure proper implementation of government schemes, and avoid unnecessary political disputes that could mislead the public and affect development progress across the region.

WIM Mangaluru president Ayesha Yasmin said rising fuel and essential prices strain families, urging government relief for vulnerable groups

MANGALURU WOMEN PROTEST LPG PRICE HIKE

MANGALURU

In Mangaluru, activists of the Women India Movement (WIM) staged a protest in front of the taluk office against the recent hike in LPG cooking gas prices and central government policies they described as anti-people.

The demonstrators alleged that rising costs of essential commodities have placed a heavy burden on daily wage workers, women, and middle-class families. Holding placards and raising slogans, they demanded immediate relief measures to control inflation and reduce the financial strain on households.'

WIM Mangaluru city president Ayesha Yasmin said continuous price increases in cooking gas and other essentials have made it difficult for ordinary families to manage basic expenses. Garbage workers stumble upon large bullet cache

BELAGAVI

In a surprising incident in Belagavi city, civic workers sorting waste at an industrial area found 59 used bullets mixed in a garbage pile. The discovery immediately alarmed the workers, who informed the local police.

Police from the Udyambag station arrived and secured the site. Initial checks created confusion as officers tried to determine how such a large number of spent cartridges ended up in household waste.

Later investigations revealed that the ammunition was linked to a retired soldier originally from Vijayapura, who had reportedly brought the used cartridges to his relatives' home to show children as part of curiosity and explanation. When the family later vacated the house, they mistakenly discarded the items along with other waste, leading to the recovery at the dump site. Police said that all 59 bullets were already spent and posed no immediate danger, though verification continues as part of standard procedure. The incident has drawn attention in the region as authorities continue to examine how military ammunition entered civilian waste streams in the first place.

Officials are also reviewing whether any procedural lapses occurred in handling of the cartridges after they were brought from the residence. According to preliminary findings, the materials were not active explosives but empty shell casings previously fired at a controlled environment. Residents of the industrial area expressed surprise and concern over the discovery, prompting renewed discussions on waste segregation safety protocols in the city.

Authorities have assured the public that there is no threat to safety and that the investigation will clarify all circumstances surrounding the incident. The case remains under active review by local police teams as they trace the chain of custody of the recovered items and record statements from involved individuals.

Further updates are expected after detailed forensic examination concludes. investigation continues.

Sindhanur farmers block road over maize payment delay

SINDHANUR

In Raichur's Sindhanur taluk, farmers staged a road blockade demanding immediate release of pending payments for maize supplied to government procurement centres.

The protest, held near the Pothnal–Balaganur Cross on the Raichur road, was organised under the banner of the Karnataka Rajya Raitha Sangha and Hasiru Sene. The agitation disrupted traffic for over an hour, causing long vehicle queues and inconvenience to commuters, while police struggled to restore order.

Farmers alleged that despite supplying maize nearly three months ago, payments had not been credited to their bank accounts. They said the delay had created severe financial stress, particularly during the ongoing monsoon season when funds are urgently needed for sowing and other agricultural activities.

Addressing the gathering, farmer leaders said cultivators invest heavily in seeds, labour, and inputs, but are forced to wait months after selling their produce. They warned that continued delays were pushing many farmers toward private moneylenders, increasing their debt burden.

Protesters questioned how agriculture could be sustained if payments were not released even after several months, and demanded a fixed timeline for settlement of procurement dues. They urged the government to clear all pending payments immediately and ensure a more reliable system in future procurement cycles.

Tahsildar Arun H. Desai visited the protest site and received a memorandum from the farmers, assuring them that their grievances would be forwarded to higher authorities for action. Police, led by CPI Vinayak and PSI Eriyappa, maintained tight security to prevent escalation.

However, Indian intelligence agencies are already on high alert, watching these moves closely to destroy the new plot before it can grow.

DGP Anand directs inter-agency monsoon response plan

Telangana police are coordinating with civic agencies to prevent flooding and traffic disruptions during heavy monsoon rains.

HYDERABAD

With heavy monsoon rains hitting the state, Telangana's top police official is taking no chances. Director General of Police C.V. Anand met with city leaders to build a solid shield against urban flooding and the chaotic traffic jams that usually follow.

During a major meeting in Malkampet, DGP Anand ordered multiple departments to work as one team. He told officers to watch low-lying zones and busy roads like hawks. The goal is simple, keep vehicles moving and keep citizens safe. If a road floods, the police must instantly share alternative routes with the public. Emergency response teams are now on high alert, ready to jump into action the moment a storm hits.

To fix things on the ground, special engineering teams are already inspecting troubled areas.

They are visiting known flood hotspots, including Khajaguda Lake and regions near Biodiversity Junction. These teams will check blocked drains, illegal constructions, and bad water flow, then quickly submit reports with quick fixes and permanent solutions.

Government Advisor Sudarshan Reddy and top municipal chiefs also attended the session.

The DGP sent a very clear message to every officer stating, zero negligence will be tolerated. Public safety is the absolute number one priority until the rainy season ends. With better coordination between the police, water experts, and city planners, Hyderabad aims to stay dry and moving this year.

Annamalai slams extreme NEET exam security rules

CHENNAI

Politician K. Annamalai has openly criticized the intense security rules planned for the upcoming NEET retest on June 21. While the government wants to stop cheating, Annamalai warns that these "military-style" measures will only terrify students who are already facing immense pressure.

The government plans to use central armed forces, Indian Air Force transport, biometric scans, and strict AI face-tracking cameras. Even the Prime Minister's Office will directly monitor the test. Annamalai argued that these dramatic operations belong in high-security war zones, not inside regular school classrooms during an academic entrance test.

He pointed out that making students go through multiple intense body searches before entering centers will make them incredibly nervous. Additionally, the government has extended the test time to 195 minutes. Annamalai believes this extra time, mixed with rigid rules, creates a painful burden instead of helping. He stated this aggressive approach goes completely against national policies that aim to reduce student anxiety.

K. Annamalai criticizes strict security plans for the NEET retest, calling them excessive and warning they may increase stress and anxiety among students.

To make matters worse, many students are already stressed out because they are struggling to download their exam hall tickets. Annamalai urged authorities to find a fair balance. He emphasized that protecting the absolute honesty of the exam is important, but protecting the mental health of young students must matter just as much.

AJUP Chief Kabir questions rebel MPs' party switch

KOLKATA

Aam Janata Unnayan Party (AJUP) chief Humayun Kabir criticised 20 former Trinamool Congress Members of Parliament who recently decided to join the National Citizens Party of India (NCPI), saying they should have resigned from their seats before switching political sides. The rebel MPs had announced their decision to join the Tripura-based party and formally informed the Lok Sabha Speaker through a letter submitted recently.

Reacting to the development, Kabir said that the MPs were elected on the Trinamool Congress symbol and should have stepped down if they truly believed in their new political path.

He argued that resigning and seeking a fresh mandate from the people would have been the right course of action. According to Kabir, the voters should decide whether the MPs' criticism of the Trinamool leadership is justified.

INDIA EUROPE FTA BOOST

EU-India trade deal opens new doors

NEW DELHI

A new trade deal between India and the European Union is set to supercharge economic growth for both regions. Following Prime Minister Narendra Modi's four-nation European tour, reports highlights how this upcoming Free Trade Agreement (FTA) will open massive markets and secure global supply chains.

Currently, a huge gap exists in their trading relationship. In 2024, the EU stood as India's second-largest trading partner, yet India accounted for a mere 1.7 percent of the EU's total global trade. The new FTA aims to fix this imbalance. Under the agreement, the EU will scrap tariffs on over 90 percent of its trade lines. This gives Indian businesses a major boost to increase their share in the European market.

This tariff reduction is a lifesaver for India's textile and garment sectors. For years, Indian exporters faced higher taxes than rivals in Bangladesh and Pakistan. By leveling the playing field, the deal will protect small businesses and create millions of local jobs.Furthermore, the agreement brings excellent news for India's powerful technology and services sectors. It creates clear, friendly rules for cross-border digital trade, which will help expand Global Capability Centers across India. Ultimately, this landmark pact allows European companies to pitch their businesses to India's booming middle class, while giving India seamless access to advanced European technology.

It is a true win-win that turns commercial ties into long-term national development.

Minister Chouhan stresses advance monsoon planning steps

Agriculture Ministry urges advance planning as El Niño risks threaten Kharif 2026 season and rainfall patterns.

NEW DELHI

The Union Agriculture Ministry has called for advance planning in districts that may face low rainfall as the El Nino weather pattern threatens to affect the upcoming farming season. Agriculture Minister Shivraj Singh Chouhan reviewed preparations for the Kharif 2026 season in a high-level meeting at Krishi Bhawan in New Delhi with senior officials. He said districts likely to receive deficient or uneven rainfall must be identified early so that crop-wise contingency plans can be prepared in coordination with state governments. The aim is to ensure farmers receive timely guidance and support if weather conditions worsen.

Officials discussed crop targets, sowing progress, and overall preparedness across states. Special attention was given to increasing cotton production through better farming practices, improved seed selection, intercropping, and moisture conservation techniques. The minister also stressed efforts to boost productivity and farmer incomes by promoting scientific agriculture methods and better resource management in cotton cultivation.Another key focus of the meeting was the Pulse Self-Reliance Mission. Chouhan said the government aims to reduce dependence on imports and increase domestic production of pulses such as pigeon pea, black gram, and green gram. The government noted that India is better prepared to handle a possible weak monsoon this year due to higher reservoir levels, strong foodgrain stocks, and improvements in agricultural planning systems.

According to official data, reservoir storage levels in May stood at 30.4 per cent of total capacity, higher than the average levels recorded during previous El Nino years. Officials said these measures are expected to help protect farmers from potential weather-related losses while maintaining food security across the country.

PATNA

Former Bihar Chief Minister and Leader of Opposition in the Bihar Legislative Council, Rabri Devi, has requested an additional one-month extension to vacate the government residence at 10 Circular Road in Patna after the expiry of a 15-day deadline set by the administration. She submitted an official letter to authorities seeking more time after the deadline ended, saying the family needs additional time to complete arrangements for shifting to a new allotted residence.In her request, Rabri Devi cited the health condition of her husband, RJD chief Lalu Prasad Yadav, as the main reason for the delay. She said doctors have advised that he remain in isolation from other family members due to his vulnerability to infections. She added that a separate room had been specially arranged for him at the current residence on medical advice, and similar arrangements will need to be made at the new bungalow before the family can move.Lalu Prasad Yadav has been suffering from multiple health issues in recent years, including a kidney transplant in 2022, heart surgery in 2014, and another angioplasty in 2024.

DMK Chief Stalin targets TN government failures

CHENNAI

M. K. Stalin, leader of DMK, criticised Tamil Nadu Chief Minister Vijay's government over worsening law and order in the state. He said people are living in fear due to rising crimes against women and children and demanded stronger action from the administration.

He questioned government's claims about police efficiency and women safety force Singappen Padai and asked whether grieving families are being heard.

He alleged criminals are acting without fear and asked what steps have been taken to stop offences and protect public confidence.

He also criticised the Chief Minister's silence on recent incidents and asked when the government would respond more actively to safety concerns.

Tripura Sarinda receives GI tag, boosting cultural heritage and supporting indigenous artisans and traditional musical craftsmanship.

Traditional Sarinda receives GI recognition in Tripura

AGARTALA

Tripura has received a major cultural boost after its traditional musical instrument, the 'Tripura Sarinda', was awarded the Geographical Indication (GI) tag, strengthening efforts to preserve the state's indigenous heritage. Chief Minister Manik Saha said that the recognition marks an important step in protecting and promoting Tripura's folk traditions. He added that the GI tag will help preserve the identity of the instrument and support the artisans and musicians associated with it.

The Chief Minister said the recognition highlights the creativity and craftsmanship of tribal communities who have kept the musical tradition alive for generations. He also expressed hope that the instrument will gain wider recognition at both national and international levels. With this addition, Tripura now has four GI-tagged products, reflecting its rich cultural and traditional diversity. The earlier GI-certified products include the Queen Pineapple, traditional tribal textiles such as Risha and Pachra (Rignai), and Matabari Peda, a sweet offered as prasad at the Tripura Sundari Temple.

Officials said the GI tag helps protect the originality of these products and prevents misuse of their names while also improving market value and recognition. Tripura is already known for its Queen and Kew varieties of pineapple, which are widely grown in its hilly regions and valued for their taste, aroma, and natural farming methods.

The state government has also launched initiatives to promote pineapple cultivation and exports, including the 'Mission Queen Pineapple' programme aimed at expanding production and market access. The latest GI recognition is expected to further strengthen Tripura's cultural identity and support local communities involved in traditional arts and crafts.

NEW DELHI

Political tensions in Punjab intensified after leaders from the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) and Congress criticised Chief Minister Bhagwant Mann following strong remarks made by the Akal Takht over an alleged objectionable video linked to him. The Akal Takht, the highest temporal seat of Sikh authority, had earlier declared Mann "anti-Guru" and issued directions for social boycott after reviewing the video, which it said hurt Sikh religious sentiments.

Reacting to the development, BJP leaders accused Mann of repeatedly changing his stand and failing to accept the findings of religious authorities. Punjab BJP president Kewal Singh Dhillon said that the Chief Minister should respect the decision of the Akal Takht and abide by its directives. Another BJP leader, Fateh Jang Singh Bajwa, said the Sikh clergy had already taken a serious view of the matter and that the video had been verified as genuine after investigation. He said the issue reflected badly on the ruling Aam Aadmi Party.

Congress leaders also criticised Mann, saying the controversy raises serious concerns about his conduct. One Congress spokesperson said voters in Punjab would respond strongly in the upcoming state elections. Meanwhile, Punjab minister Aman Arora avoided making direct comments and said the Chief Minister would clarify his position.

Chief Minister Mann has rejected the allegations, calling the viral video fake and part of a conspiracy to damage his image. He said the content does not match him and claimed it is being spread as political propaganda. The issue has sparked a major political and religious debate in Punjab, with strong reactions from both ruling and opposition parties.

LoC landmine explosion injures four soldiers

JAMMU

Four Indian Army personnel, including a Junior Commissioned Officer (JCO), were injured in an accidental landmine explosion along the Line of Control (LoC) in Jammu and Kashmir's Rajouri district, officials said. The incident occurred during an area domination patrol in the forward Kalal area of the Nowshera sector when a landmine was accidentally triggered. Security officials said the injured soldiers were immediately evacuated to a hospital for treatment.

According to officials, the explosion is believed to have been caused by a "drift mine", a landmine that shifts from its original position due to rain or terrain movement, increasing the risk of accidental blasts in forward areas. The LoC in Jammu and Kashmir remains heavily guarded by the Army and is often lined with landmines as part of anti-infiltration measures. These mines are intended to prevent cross-border infiltration and movement of armed groups.

Officials said the region has a long and sensitive border stretch where such incidents occasionally occur during patrol operations in difficult terrain. Security forces also reported recent drone sightings in the Rajouri sector, prompting search operations in nearby villages. However, no weapons or suspicious materials were recovered during the checks.

Authorities said anti-drone systems and surveillance technology have been deployed in border areas to counter aerial threats and reduce cross-border smuggling attempts involving arms and narcotics. The Army continues to maintain high alert along the LoC, where both ground infiltration.

INDIA UAV EXPANSION

IAF pushes indigenous "Kamikaze" drone project plan

NEW DELHI

The Indian Air Force has started a project with Indian industry to build long-range kamikaze drones an official said. The plan includes a limited tender to select Indian companies for one-way attack unmanned aerial systems being developed under the programme. The project will be led by the 5 Base Repair Depot at Sulur near Coimbatore in Tamil Nadu as the nodal centre.

Kamikaze drones also known as loitering munitions are one-way self-sacrificing weapons that fly to targets locate enemies and explode on impact. Under the plan the Air Force will hold intellectual property rights for the system allowing upgrades and changes through Indian companies. The drones are expected to operate up to 16000 feet and work in day and night conditions. Defence Minister Rajnath Singh has said India must become a global hub for drone manufacturing and strengthen self-reliance. US led Gulf oil transfers under scrutiny

DUBAI

A reported United States military operation is using a ship-to-ship oil transfer system in the Gulf that resembles tactics long used by Iran to move crude quietly across waters near the Strait of Hormuz. The operation involves coordinated convoys of tankers that switch off transponders and travel in staggered positions while moving oil between ships at sea.

According to reporting, dozens of vessels have taken part since May, with satellite images showing repeated transfers near Fujairah in the United Arab Emirates and Sohar in Oman. The system is described as risky because ships operate at night with minimal visibility, increasing chances of collision and miscommunication during long transfers that can last more than a day. Officials say the effort is aimed at keeping Gulf oil exports moving despite tensions around Iran and disruptions linked to conflict in the region.

At least ninety ships are believed to be involved, moving millions of barrels of crude and petroleum products through offshore transfer points monitored by the US military. Companies including state-linked Gulf producers and international shipping operators are said to be participating after compliance checks and approval procedures.

Analysts warn that while the system helps maintain flow of energy, it also raises safety risks and lacks full transparency for global markets. This reports the operation reflects new ways of managing shipping routes in a highly sensitive maritime zone, where geopolitical tensions continue to threaten global oil security and trade stability across major energy markets worldwide in coming month's periods.

Tragic Afghan bus crash kills four

KABUL

A devastating mini-bus accident in eastern Afghanistan's Wardak province has left four travelers dead, including a mother, her young child, and two women. Local police spokesman Mohammad Yusuf Israr confirmed that the vehicle flipped over in the Saydabad district. Four other passengers sustained severe injuries, with several reportedly in critical condition. Deadly traffic accidents are rising across the country due to poor roads and reckless driving. This tragedy follows another horrific crash just weeks ago in Laghman province, which killed eighteen newly returned Afghan migrants, including ten children.

Iran executes protesters for waging war

DUBAI

Iran has executed two men accused of being armed leaders during widespread anti-government protests earlier this year. The judiciary's official news outlet, Mizan, identified the individuals as Javad Zamani and Abolfazl Saedi. Both men were hanged in Shahrud County after being convicted of "Moharebeh," a severe Islamic charge meaning waging war against God. Authorities also found them guilty of corruption on earth, harming public security, and burning property, including a local mosque.

Australia flags powerful El Niño formation

SYDNEY

Australia's weather authorities warned that an El Nino climate pattern has formed in the tropical Pacific Ocean and could grow into one of the strongest in decades in the second half of 2026.

The Bureau of Meteorology said sea surface temperatures in the Pacific have crossed key thresholds, confirming the development of El Nino conditions. It added that most climate models suggest the event could intensify further in the coming months.

Officials said around half of the forecasts indicate the system may reach levels not seen since the 1950s, making it potentially one of the most powerful events in nearly 70 years.

El Nino is a natural climate pattern that usually brings major weather changes across the world. It is often linked with reduced rainfall in parts of Australia, especially on the east coast, along with hotter and drier conditions. The bureau warned that such conditions could seriously affect agriculture, as Australia is a major global exporter of wheat, sugar, and beef.

Australia warns a potentially strong El Niño could form in 2026, bringing drought risks locally and heavy rainfall disruptions across global regions.

Lower rainfall and heat stress could impact crop growth and livestock production.

Experts also noted that the effects of El Nino may be worsened by ongoing climate change, which can increase temperature extremes and shift rainfall patterns. The weather system is also expected to bring heavy rains to parts of the Americas, while disrupting farming activities in parts of Asia, where food security concerns are already high. Australia experienced a severe El Nino event in 2023 and 2024, which led to one of the driest periods on record and affected farm output significantly.

Trump urges diplomatic Ukraine war settlement

EVIAN-LES-BAINS

US President Donald Trump called on Russia to move toward a peace deal with Ukraine following what he described as a positive meeting with Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskiy during the G7 summit in France. Trump said he had a "very good" discussion with Zelenskiy and other G7 leaders and added that he would do everything possible to help end the ongoing war. He also said Russia should take steps to reach an agreement and bring the conflict to a close.

The meeting took place on the sidelines of the G7 summit held in Evian-les-Bains, where global leaders gathered to discuss major international issues, including the wars in Ukraine and tensions involving Iran. Zelenskiy said the focus of his discussions with world leaders was strengthening Ukraine's air defence systems and pushing forward diplomatic efforts aimed at ending the war. He also stressed the need for continued international support.

European leaders at the summit said they believed Russia was currently under pressure on the battlefield and that Ukraine's position had improved in recent months. They urged stronger backing for Kyiv to increase its negotiating strength. Trump also held talks with European partners, who encouraged him to avoid any weak or temporary peace arrangements and instead push for a stronger long-term settlement.

The summit also addressed tensions in the Middle East, including concerns over the Strait of Hormuz and Iran-related security issues. While diplomatic efforts continue, divisions remain among allies over how to structure future negotiations and how much pressure should be placed.

Palestinian doctor's detention appeal rejected by Israeli court

JERUSALEM

Israel's Supreme Court rejected an appeal seeking the release of a prominent Palestinian doctor who has been held without formal charges since late 2024 after being detained in Gaza. The case involves Hussam Abu Safiya, the director of Kamal Adwan Hospital in Gaza, who is among several Palestinian medical workers being held in Israel under administrative detention without trial for more than a year. The court's decision was reportedly based on confidential information that was not shared with the doctor or his legal representative, according to his lawyer and rights groups.

Abu Safiya's lawyer said the ruling highlights concerns about prolonged detention without transparent evidence being presented in open court. Human rights organisations have also raised concerns about fairness and due process in such cases. The Israeli prison service has denied allegations that the doctor has been mistreated. However, rights groups claim he has faced poor conditions, including limited food access and periods of solitary confinement.

Reports also state that Abu Safiya appeared recently in a court hearing via video link, where he appeared physically weaker than before. The Israeli military has accused him of having links to the Palestinian group Hamas, but no public evidence has been provided. Gaza health authorities and Hamas have denied the allegation.

BYC leaders protest jail trial inside Quetta prison

QUETTA

Leaders of the Baloch Yakjehti Committee (BYC) staged a sit-in protest inside Huda Jail in Quetta, opposing what they described as a "faceless trial" and calling the legal process unfair and unconstitutional. The protest, which entered its third consecutive day, was reported by the organisation in a statement shared on social media. The group alleged that authorities have imposed strict restrictions inside the prison and are preventing normal access to detainees.

According to BYC, relatives and lawyers of the detained leaders have been waiting for hours outside the jail but are not being allowed to meet them. The group claimed this has raised fears that the prisoners are being pressured or harassed while in custody. The organisation demanded that all legal and human rights of political detainees be respected and called for an immediate end to what it called an "illegal and faceless trial." It also urged authorities to stop what it described as unfair judicial proceedings.

BYC leaders said they have been in custody for around 14 months and claimed they have faced both physical and mental hardship during this period. They argued that repeated changes in trial procedures show a lack of transparency and fairness in the process. Among those detained is BYC chief organiser Mahrang Baloch, who has been held since March 2025. Her detention has drawn criticism from human rights groups and political organisations. The Baloch National Movement also expressed concern, calling the proceedings unjust and alleging that the judicial process lacks independence and transparency in the case.

China, Myanmar discuss economic cooperation plans

BEIJING

China gave a formal welcome to Myanmar's President Min Aung Hlaing during his state visit to Beijing, marking a major diplomatic moment for the former military chief as he seeks wider recognition of his leadership. The visit included a ceremonial reception at the Great Hall of the People, where Chinese President Xi Jinping met Min Aung Hlaing. The trip is being seen as a significant step for Myanmar's military-backed administration, which has faced strong international criticism since taking power after the 2021 coup.

Reports say the visit gives Min Aung Hlaing a boost in legitimacy, especially after a recent election that excluded major opposition groups and resulted in an army-supported government taking power. China, Myanmar's largest trading partner, is expected to focus discussions on economic projects, border trade, and resource development. Key topics likely include infrastructure projects under China's Belt and Road Initiative and access to rare earth minerals from border regions.

The delegation also includes officials from Myanmar's Kachin and Shan states, areas that share borders with China and are rich in natural resources. These regions have also seen ongoing armed conflict between the military and ethnic armed groups. Experts believe projects such as the long-stalled Myitsone Dam may be discussed again during the visit, along with wider investment and trade agreements between the two countries.

Myanmar has been in civil war since the 2021 military takeover, which triggered nationwide protests and armed resistance. The conflict has killed tens of thousands and displaced millions of people. Observers note that China continues to play a key role in Myanmar through trade, diplomacy, and strategic influence, while also managing its own security and economic interests along the border region.

BRITAIN TARGETS RUSSIAN WAR FUNDING NETWORK

LONDON

Britain announced a fresh round of sanctions against Russia, targeting ships, banks, and companies it says are helping fund and support Moscow's war efforts in Ukraine. The measures include restrictions on the banking arm of Russian tech firm Yandex, along with two other financial institutions and dozens of oil and gas vessels accused of helping export Russian energy in violation of Western sanctions. UK officials said more than 20 oil tankers and several liquefied natural gas carriers have been blacklisted as part of the crackdown. The government also said this is the first time a Group of Seven nation has sanctioned ships linked to Russia's Arctic LNG 2 energy project.

Prime Minister Keir Starmer said the sanctions are aimed at cutting off the money, shipping routes, and networks that support Russia's wartime economy and pose risks to European security. Britain also targeted what it described as Russia's "shadow fleet," a group of ageing ships registered in different countries and used to secretly transport oil while avoiding sanctions. Officials said nearly 600 such vessels have now been sanctioned by the UK. In addition, the UK said it disrupted a covert procurement.

EBOLA SURGE WARNING

NAIROBI

The Red Cross has warned that the Ebola outbreak in eastern Democratic Republic of Congo has not yet reached its peak and could continue for up to a year. An official from the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies said that it is still unclear how far the disease has spread, but the worst phase may still lie ahead.

Health data shows more than 800 suspected and confirmed cases of Ebola have been reported so far, with at least 192 deaths. The outbreak involves the rare Bundibugyo strain, for which no proven vaccine or treatment is currently available. The disease is known to spread through direct contact with infected bodily fluids, and can remain contagious even after death, making control efforts more difficult in affected areas.

Officials said the virus is spreading across three provinces in eastern Congo, and the true scale of the outbreak is still not fully known more than a month after it was first declared.

Response teams have faced serious challenges, including a lack of treatment centers and resistance from local communities to strict health and hygiene measures.

Red Cross workers involved in safe burials and community outreach have also reported threats, verbal abuse, and attacks in recent days, according to officials. Health responders stressed that building trust with communities is essential to controlling the outbreak, saying that cooperation is necessary for survival in such emergencies.

Authorities and aid groups continue to expand efforts to contain the spread, but experts warn that the situation remains unstable and may take a long time to bring under control.

Iran Fights Back Twice To Hold New Zealand

FIFA WORLD CUP 2026

Iran earned a dramatic draw against New Zealand in a thrilling World Cup Group G encounter

INGLEWOOD

Iran produced a spirited comeback performance to secure a 2-2 draw against New Zealand national football team in an entertaining Group G match at Los Angeles Stadium. The closely contested encounter saw Iran come from behind twice to earn a valuable point in front of a crowd exceeding 70,000 spectators.

The match took place against a politically charged backdrop, with some supporters expressing views related to developments in Iran and recent geopolitical tensions. Despite the atmosphere surrounding the event, the focus quickly shifted to an engaging contest on the field.

New Zealand made an ideal start when forward Elijah Just opened the scoring early in the match. The goal came after captain Chris Wood provided a precise pass inside the penalty area, allowing Just to finish confidently and give the All Whites an early advantage.

Iran gradually settled into the contest and found an equalizer shortly after the half-hour mark. Defender Ramin Rezaeian reacted quickest after a shot was blocked by a defender and calmly poked the rebound past the advancing goalkeeper. The goal sparked celebrations among the large number of Iranian supporters in attendance.

The second half began in a similar fashion to the first, with New Zealand once again taking the lead. Chris Wood played a key role, delivering a well-weighted pass that found Elijah Just in space. The forward made no mistake, striking powerfully to score his second goal of the evening and restore New Zealand's advantage.

However, Iran refused to surrender and produced another response ten minutes later. Rezaeian turned provider this time, delivering an accurate cross into the penalty area. Winger Mohammad Mohebbi met the delivery perfectly, directing a header into the net via the far post to level the score at 2-2.

As the match entered its closing stages, Iran appeared the more dangerous side and created several promising opportunities. The Asian side pushed hard for a winning goal, but New Zealand's defense managed to hold firm and preserve the draw until the final whistle.

Following the match, Rezaeian dedicated his performance to his family and the people of Iran, expressing gratitude for their support during difficult times. The result leaves Group G finely balanced.

CAPE VERDE Stuns Spain with Historic WC Draw

ATLANTA

Cape Verde produced one of the biggest surprises of the World Cup so far by holding European champions Spain national football team to a goalless draw in their tournament debut. The African nation delivered a courageous defensive performance to frustrate one of the world's strongest teams and secure a historic point in Group H.

Spain dominated almost every statistical category throughout the match, enjoying nearly 75 percent possession and creating 27 goal attempts. However, despite controlling the ball for long periods and spending much of the game in the opposition half, the Spaniards were unable to find a way past veteran Cape Verde goalkeeper Vozinha.

The 40-year-old goalkeeper emerged as the hero of the night, producing a series of crucial saves to preserve the clean sheet. His performance earned him the Player of the Match award, and he was visibly emotional at the final whistle after helping his country achieve a remarkable result on its first appearance at a FIFA World Cup.

Cape Verde adopted a highly disciplined defensive strategy from the opening minutes. The team often defended with a five-man backline and packed players around their penalty area, creating a formidable barrier against Spain's attacking threats. While the European side moved the ball patiently from side to side searching for openings, the African debutants remained organized, composed, and determined.

The defensive effort was particularly notable because Cape Verde managed to maintain their structure without resorting to excessive fouling. The team conceded only one foul throughout the match, the fewest recorded by any side in a FIFA World Cup game since such records began in 1966.

Spain's tactical approach also came under scrutiny. Head coach Luis de la Fuente opted to leave exciting wingers Lamine Yamal and Nico Williams on the bench at the start. In their absence, Ferran Torres and Gavi struggled to provide the pace and creativity needed to break down Cape Verde's compact defensive setup.

The result brought back memories of Spain's frustrating elimination against Morocco in the round of 16 at the 2022 World Cup, where they also dominated possession but failed to convert their superiority into goals. Once again, Spain found themselves facing a well-organized defensive unit that successfully absorbed wave after wave of pressure. After the match, Spain captain Rodri acknowledged his team's disappointment but insisted there was little to criticize regarding their overall performance. He noted that Spain had expected a patient contest against a deeply defensive opponent and admitted that finishing remained the key area requiring improvement.

For Cape Verde, however, the draw represented a landmark achievement. The result not only earned the nation its first World Cup point but also showcased its ability to compete against elite opposition.

Iran World Cup Opener Played Amid Political Tensions

INGLEWOOD

Iran began its World Cup campaign with a 2-2 draw against New Zealand national football team in Los Angeles, but the match attracted attention not only for the action on the field but also for the political atmosphere surrounding the event. The encounter took place in front of a large crowd that included both passionate supporters of the national team and Iranian Americans expressing opposition to the government in Tehran.

The match came at a particularly sensitive moment following the announcement of a peace agreement aimed at ending a conflict that began after military action involving the United States and Israel against Iran earlier this year. Iran's players arrived in the United States only a day before the match, travelling from their training base in Tijuana, Mexico.

Los Angeles, which is home to one of the world's largest Iranian communities outside Iran, provided a unique setting for the fixture. Many members of the local Iranian diaspora left their homeland following the 1979 Islamic Revolution, and opinions within the community remain deeply divided regarding political developments in Iran.

While a significant number of spectators enthusiastically supported the Iranian team throughout the match, many also used the occasion to express political views. Numerous fans displayed the pre-revolutionary Lion and Sun flag, a symbol associated with Iran before 1979 and now frequently used by groups critical of the current government. The flags were visible throughout the stadium as supporters sought to distinguish their support for the national team from their political opinions.

Some attendees went further by openly supporting New Zealand or expressing dissatisfaction with Iran's team, which certain critics view as representing the state. These actions highlighted the complex relationship between sports and politics within parts of the Iranian diaspora community.

Outside the stadium, several hundred demonstrators gathered to protest against the Iranian government. Protesters carried banners and flags expressing opposition to Tehran's leadership while drawing attention to issues they believe deserve international focus.

Despite concerns raised before the match, security personnel permitted many spectators carrying Lion and Sun flags or wearing clothing featuring the symbol to enter the venue.

LUKAKU INSPIRES BELGIUM TO DRAW AGAINST EGYPT

SEATTLE

Belgium fought back from a goal down to secure a 1-1 draw against Egypt national football team in their opening Group G match of the FIFA World Cup. The European side was rescued by the influential introduction of star striker Romelu Lukaku, whose presence helped Belgium avoid defeat in a closely contested encounter.

Egypt stunned Belgium by taking the lead against the run of play in the 19th minute. Midfielder Emam Ashour produced a powerful strike to score his first international goal and give the African side a valuable advantage. The goal boosted Egypt's confidence and increased hopes of recording a historic World Cup victory.

Belgium dominated possession and created several opportunities to level the score before halftime. However, the team's finishing let them down. Winger Jeremy Doku missed a promising chance when he sliced his effort wide, while captain Kevin De Bruyne came agonizingly close with a free kick that struck the post.

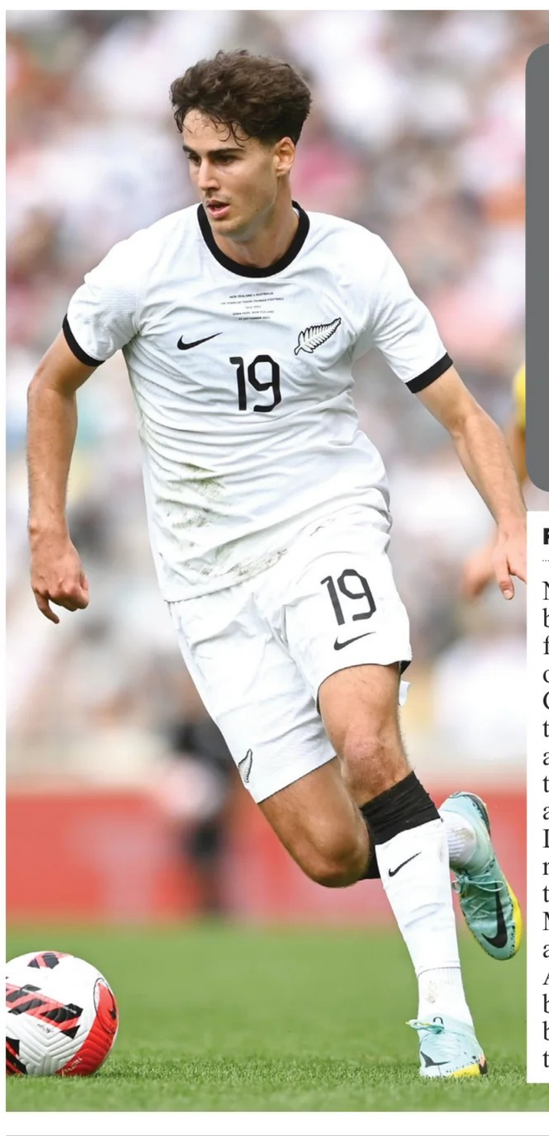
As the match progressed, Egypt continued to defend resolutely and looked increasingly capable of preserving their lead. However, Belgium coach Rudi Garcia decided to introduce Romelu Lukaku in the 66th minute, a move that immediately transformed the game.

Just seconds after entering the field, Lukaku's impact was felt. The striker's presence caused problems for the Egyptian defense, and a dangerous cross into the penalty area resulted in defender Mohamed Hany inadvertently turning the ball into his own net. The unfortunate own goal brought Belgium level and shifted momentum in favor of the European side.

The closing stages produced opportunities for both teams as neither side appeared satisfied with a draw. Egypt continued to attack whenever possible, while Belgium pushed forward in search of a winner. Lukaku came closest to deciding the contest when he missed a golden opportunity to score with a header just two minutes before the end of normal time.

Following the match, Rudi Garcia praised Lukaku's influence and highlighted the psychological effect the striker has on opponents. The Belgium coach suggested that even when Lukaku is unable to start matches, he remains a powerful weapon capable of changing games from the bench.

Garcia also remained optimistic about Belgium's chances of progressing from the group despite the dropped points.



New Zealand's Garbett ruled out of World Cup with injury

FORT LAUDERDALE

New Zealand midfielder Matt Garbett has been ruled out of the World Cup after suffering a hamstring injury in training ahead of his side's 2-2 draw with Iran in their Group G opener. The whole squad's thoughts are with Matt at this time and we are gutted he won't be able to play in the tournament, New Zealand Football said in a social media post. Auckland FC forward Logan Rogerson has been called up as a replacement for Garbett, who plays for Peterborough United in England's third tier. Matty's a good mate of mine and I am really gutted for him, Rogerson said in an Auckland statement. It's a weird feeling to be honest, slightly conflicted as I am also buzzing to get out there and meet up with the team.

Uruguay held to 1-1 draw by Saudi Arabia in World Cup opener

MIAMI

Saudi Arabia and Uruguay played out a 1-1 draw in their Group H World Cup opener after Abdulelah Al Amri's opener for the Gulf nation was cancelled out by Maxi Araujo in a game where both sides profited from goalkeeping errors. The first half was dominated by Uruguay but Saudi Arabia took the lead against the run of play in the 41st minute when Fernando Muslera made a costly error on a set-piece, parrying the ball into the path of Al Amri who poked the ball past the veteran keeper. The majority of the second period was played in Saudi Arabia's half as Uruguay frantically searched for an equaliser and their persistence paid off when goalkeeper Mohammed Al Owais also made an error when a save fell nicely for Araujo to fire home.

Football fans in Gaza continue following the World Cup despite displacement, destruction, and ongoing insecurity

Gazans Follow World Cup amid Hardships and Conflict

CAIRO

For many residents of Gaza, the FIFA World Cup has become a rare source of distraction and hope amid years of conflict, displacement, and uncertainty. Despite severe challenges, football enthusiasts across the territory are making extraordinary efforts to follow the tournament, demonstrating the enduring power of sport even during difficult times.

Among them is Fadi Al-Arawi, a player in the Gaza Strip Premier League who has been unable to compete professionally since sporting activities were suspended following the outbreak of war more than two years ago. Like countless others in Gaza, Al-Arawi no longer has a permanent home and now lives in temporary shelter conditions.

As the World Cup match between Qatar national football team and Switzerland national football team approached, Al-Arawi gathered with friends inside a school converted into a shelter for displaced families in Khan Younis. Wearing his old Gaza Sports Club uniform and medals earned during his football career, he attempted to secure an internet connection through a laptop so the group could watch the match.

Internet disruptions, electricity shortages, and ongoing security concerns have made following the tournament a challenge for many Gazans. According to residents, unstable communications and infrastructure damage frequently interrupt broadcasts and online access, forcing supporters to rely on alternative methods to stay connected with the competition.

The conflict has had a devastating impact on Gaza's infrastructure, with extensive destruction affecting homes, public facilities, and sporting venues. Even after periods of reduced hostilities, many residents continue to face difficult living conditions in overcrowded shelters, damaged buildings, and temporary camps.

Despite these hardships, football remains deeply important to local communities. Cafes and gathering places have become key venues where residents can watch matches together whenever electricity and internet access allow. In Gaza City, café owner Alaa Babli has invested in alternative power systems and backup batteries to ensure World Cup matches can still be shown after fuel-powered generators are switched off.

Supporters continue to gather despite concerns about safety. Many view the opportunity to watch football as a brief escape from the pressures of daily life and a chance to share moments of normalcy with family and friends.

Government clarified that using E20 fuel does not affect motor insurance validity or claim settlements.

Government Refutes E20 Fuel Insurance Claim Rumours

NEW DELHI

The government on Tuesday firmly rejected claims circulating on social media that the use of E20 fuel could result in the rejection of vehicle insurance claims. Addressing growing concerns among motorists, the Press Information Bureau's Fact Check unit clarified that motor insurance policies remain fully valid for vehicles operating on E20 fuel and that no such restrictions exist.

The clarification was issued following the spread of social media posts suggesting that vehicle owners using E20 fuel might face challenges in obtaining insurance coverage or securing claim settlements. These claims generated confusion among motorists as the government continues to promote ethanol-blended fuels across the country.

In a post on the social media platform X, the PIB Fact Check unit labeled the claim as false and emphasized that the use of E20 fuel has no impact on the validity of motor insurance policies. The government reiterated that policyholders do not risk losing insurance benefits simply because they use ethanol-blended petrol in their vehicles.

Officials stressed the importance of relying on verified information and urged citizens to consult official sources before believing or sharing such claims. The PIB also encouraged the public to actively report suspicious or misleading content in order to curb the spread of misinformation on digital platforms.

The clarification comes at a time when India's ethanol blending programme has achieved significant progress. According to a recent report by KPMG in India, E20 fuel has now been operationalized acro ss the country, marking a major milestone in the government's efforts to expand the use of clea ner and more sustainable fuels.

The report highlighted both the opportunities and challenges associated with the next phase of ethanol adoption. Key issues identified include feedstock availability, supply chain efficiency, infrastructure readiness, and the need for continued policy support as the country mov es beyond E20 fuel adoption.

The government has been actively promoting ethanol-blended petrol as part of its broader strategy to reduce dependence on imported crude oil, strengthen energy security, and support environmental sustainability. Increased ethanol blending is also expected to benefit the agricultural sector by creating additional demand for feedstock crops used in ethanol production.

GOVT PROGRAMME STRONG START

Centre's Disinvestment Receipts Cross Rs 15K Cr Mark

NEW DELHI

The Central Government's disinvestment programme has recorded a strong start in the first quarter of the financial year 2026-27, with receipts expected to exceed Rs 15,000 crore during the April-June period. The growth has been primarily driven by the successful completion of offer for sale transactions involving shares of several public sector enterprises.

Disinvestment remains an important component of the government's economic strategy, helping raise resources while improving efficiency and market participation in state-owned enterprises. The latest figures indicate that investor confidence in public sector companies remains strong, enabling the government to generate substantial revenue through strategic share sales.

According to official estimates, the disinvestment proceeds have been supported by healthy demand from both institutional and retail investors. Market participants have shown continued interest in public sector stocks, particularly those with strong financial performance and growth potential. This positive response has contributed significantly to the government's revenue collection during the quarter.

The offer for sale mechanism allows the government to reduce its stake in public sector enterprises by selling shares through stock exchanges. Such transactions help improve public shareholding, enhance market liquidity, and attract a broader investor base while enabling the government to unlock value from its investments.

The anticipated crossing of the Rs 15,000 crore mark reflects the effectiveness of recent disinvestment initiatives and favorable market conditions. Analysts believe that strong equity market sentiment and improved corporate performance have created an environment conducive to successful stake sales.Disinvestment receipts play a vital role in supporting the government's fiscal objectives. The funds generated can be utilized for infrastructure development, social welfare programmes, capital expenditure, other growth-oriented initiatives. Higher receipts also help the government manage fiscal balances without placing additional pressure on borrowing requirements.

Economic experts note that the continued success of public sector share offerings demonstrates growing investor confidence in government-owned enterprises and the broader Indian economy.

The Caribbean skipper contributed 48 valuable runs and also claimed the wicket of former New Zealand captain Sophie Devine. Her performance enabled her to move ahead of New Zealand captain Melie Kerr, who slipped to second place in the rankings.

India's Deepti Sharma emerged as one of the biggest beneficiaries of the latest rankings update. The experienced all-rounder climbed two places to third in the T20I all-rounders' standings after delivering a match-winning spell against Pakistan in India's tournament opener at Edgbaston. Deepti's outstanding figures of 5 wickets for 10 runs played a decisive role in securing victory for India and reinforced her reputation as one of the world's leading all-round cricketers.

India also celebrated significant progress in the bowling rankings. Left-arm spinner Shree Charani surged five places to reach a career-best second position. Her rapid rise has placed her just five rating points behind England spinner Linsey Smith, who continues to occupy the No. 1 spot among T20I bowlers.

Deepti Sharma enjoyed further success in the bowling rankings, moving up five places to fifth. Her rise strengthens India's representation among the top-ranked bowlers in women's T20 international cricket and highlights the growing depth of the country's bowling resources.

The competition for the top bowling ranking remains highly competitive, with only 20 rating points separating the top eight bowlers. This narrow margin indicates that strong performances during the ongoing World Cup could lead to further changes in the rankings over the coming weeks.

Ashok Sharma Replaces Injured Yudhvir in India A

New Delhi

India A has made a significant change to its squad for the ongoing 50-over tri-series in Sri Lanka, with fast bowler Ashok Sharma replacing injured pacer Yudhvir Singh. The decision was announced by the Board of Control for Cricket in India after Yudhvir experienced discomfort in his right shoulder during the tournament.

According to an official statement from the BCCI, Yudhvir reported pain in his right shoulder while bowling on June 13. Medical experts diagnosed the issue as a right rotator cuff injury and advised careful management to prevent further complications. As a result, the young pacer was withdrawn from the India A squad currently competing against Sri Lanka A and Afghanistan A in Dambulla.

Ashok Sharma's inclusion comes after an impressive run of performances over the past year. He claimed 22 wickets in just ten matches, establishing himself as one of the most promising pace bowlers in the domestic circuit.

His strong domestic form earned him an opportunity in the 2026 edition of the Indian Premier League. Representing the Gujarat Titans, Ashok delivered several notable performances and collected six wickets in six matches. Gujarat Titans went on to finish as runners-up in the competition, further enhancing the visibility of the young fast bowler.

Ashok's recent move from Rajasthan to Gujarat in domestic cricket also attracted attention. He became the second prominent player after India leg-spinner Ravi Bishnoi to switch from Rajasthan to Gujarat.

MITCHELL MARSH CONFIDENT AHEAD OF BANGLADESH T20I SERIES

SYDNEY

Australia captain Mitchell Marsh is confident his side can bounce back from recent setbacks when they take on Bangladesh in a three-match T20 International series starting June 17 in Chattogram. The remaining matches will be played on June 19 and June 21. Australia enters the series after a disappointing 2-1 defeat in the ODI series against Bangladesh and will be eager to regain momentum in the shorter format.

Marsh acknowledged that the tour has been challenging but believes the squad has been strengthened by the return of several experienced T20 specialists. The skipper himself is back after missing the ODI series due to injury, providing a significant boost to the visitors.

Among the key returnees is hard-hitting batter Tim David, whom Marsh described as one of the world's best middle-order players in T20 cricket. He praised David's ability to change games with his aggressive batting and highlighted the confidence and experience he brings to the team.

Australia have also welcomed back all-rounder Aaron Hardie, adding further depth to the squad. Marsh said the blend of experienced campaigners and exciting young talent has created a positive environment within the team. Despite recent disappointments, he insisted the players remain highly motivated and are determined to produce strong performances against Bangladesh.

Litton Das Doubtful For Australia T20I Series Opener

DHAKA

Bangladesh captain Litton Das remains doubtful for the opening T20 International against Australia on June 17 after suffering a muscle tear during the third ODI in Mirpur. The wicket-keeper-batter said his chances of playing are "fifty-fifty," with a final decision to be made after further medical assessment. As a precaution, selectors have included experienced batter Soumya Sarkar in the squad to provide cover if Litton is unavailable.

Bangladesh are also monitoring the health of wicket-keeper-batter Parvez Hossain Emon, who is recovering from fever and a tonsil infection. Despite these concerns, Litton is confident about Bangladesh's prospects in the three-match T20 series. He believes the team has gained significant confidence from its historic ODI series victory over Australia in Dhaka, where Bangladesh secured their first-ever ODI series win against the visitors. Litton said several players from the ODI squad are part of the T20 setup and will carry that momentum into the shorter format.
